

Why God Created by Patriarchs Cannot Coexist with Woman that Evolved in Nature!

(Sain Sucha)

Today we have all kind of evidence how a human child is conceived and born. We have documentation for all phases of foetal development as photographic images; yet, the masters of all Abrahamic religions insist that their story of the Creator, the masculine God, who was created by them, is true, while scientific records are false evidence. Woman, the natural creator of life, is defiled as unclean and unworthy.

Here are some facts to put things right!

The God that was Created

When it comes down to how existence started, humans are split between two major groups – Those who believe in Creation and those who propose Evolution.

The creationists believe that about six thousand years ago, according to the Bible, an entity named as God (Dios, Yahveh, Allah) created the world in six days, just by the utterance of the words “Let there be light” (Genesis 1:2-3). Thus, the world was created the way it is – all living beings complete and functional, that made the necessary adaptations to our physical needs in the course of time; and, the present-day human beings are the direct descendants of the first human created. According to the Bible, the first man, Adam, was moulded out of clay and the first woman, Eve, was created out of a rib from Adam. In this version of procreation, the woman is a product of a man; and not the way we know that women give birth to men.

In one version of the Bible that was printed 1813¹, the world started about 5998 years ago. It also names Adam and Eve, and all the person who descended from them in a chronological order to the birth of Jesus.

All holy books of the Abrahamic religions share this common belief about creation, with some minor alterations in Islam. No recent modifications are done in the present-day books, keeping in mind the discoveries that are done in the last two thousand years, as the books are considered to be holy and no addition or subtraction is allowed to their text. That is the orthodox view; that there are a number of recorded alterations that were made in the past is not discussed by the clergy of these religions, especially Islam. Similar stories of creation come from other parts of the old world in the Middle East. Hinduism also gives its own version of creation, but they are not so specific about its time of origin, as human life as well as other events in life are cyclic, exact timing does not matter.

The gist of the Creationists' belief is that God manifested itself out of nothing, and everything else is God's creation.

That every rule about human birth, and all other living things, was broken. and whole content of these books was assembled and written by people who were not very educated in biology and related sciences, who in composing them used whatever they actually knew, along with an abundance of fantasy about how things could be, is a muted issue.

I presume that this kind of beliefs and stories satisfied the needs of our ancestors who were curious how life started and proceeded. In the beginning there must have been great confusion about the validity of various beliefs, until the time came when some rudimentary groups were formed who adhered strictly to specific variations of the beliefs of related people; thus, elementary religions had their beginning that propagated different beliefs.

The next step was the appearance of clergy, people who insisted, that only their beliefs were valid and practicable and gave form to various rules and tenets that must be followed. That is when various gods were created by these clergymen to give support to their version of existence, and, subsequently, to gain control over persons who followed them.

Humans, as a species, have existed much longer, almost 200,000 years, than the time described in the religious books. In other words, for thousands of years humans lived free of universal gods, and had their own answers to the mysteries of nature. So long as they lived in small groups, the survival was the main problem, while intellectual discourses, that require meditation and leisurely time, were not the vogue.

The God as we know today is a product of the human mind that was conceived about 2864 years ago², that referred to the Yahweh that created the world 3136 years earlier. No earlier references are available for the Abrahamic God; whereas, references to Brahma, the creator in Hinduism, are also found in very ancient scripts.

When was matriarchy abandoned in favour of patriarchy, we have no exact period? Most probably the change from wanderers to settled agriculturists and subsequent ownership of the property prompted the physically stronger men to take over the power from women. There are many theories about it, but the fact remains that men exerted their strength to subdue women to bear the children of particular men who provided food and shelter. The same physical strength also played its role to keep women out of the clergy, that eventually became a male dominated occupation.

Strangely enough, the main reason given to keep women out of priestly domains – synagogue, church or mosque – was that she was part of the time unclean because of her menstruation. Menstruation is the disposal of the old unfertilized and disintegrated egg from the female uterus³. Conception, on the other hand, occurs when the fertilised egg reaches the uterus and implants there to grow.⁴

Same thing happens in men in the form of night-emissions⁵ that occur from the age of 13-15 until late in life, unless semen is ejaculated in sexual intercourse or masturbation. This happens several times each week to all healthy men.

The nature of menstruation and night-emissions is the same – it is meant to get rid of unused egg or sperms from the human body. Both involve pollution of the body – in the case of women it's the discharge of the blood, and in men it is the discharge of the semen.

But, whereas in women it is once a month happening, for men it is several times each week and each month. In other words, a woman is POLLUTED about 5 days a month⁶, while men are POLLUTED anything from 12 to 18 days.

In the religious books written by men there is no mention of male pollution and its frequency; whereas, woman's menstruation is cursed time and again in all know major religions.

Why? Well, it is a deliberate effort by men to take away the honour of being the creator of all life by women (the Female), and by every possible fabrication award this honour to a God that is referred to in masculine term. According to the Semitic religions that God created the first man in his own image and from the rib of that male the first female, EVE, was created – however absurd this story may appear that brakes all the rules of biology, conception and birth by the female, the elders of these religions are adamant that their version of creation is the correct one.

⁶ The first day of menstrual bleeding is considered Day 1 of the cycle. Your period can last anywhere from 3 to 8 days, but 5 days is average. Bleeding is usually heaviest on the first 2 days. Once the bleeding stops, the uterine lining (also called the endometrium) begins to prepare for the possibility of a pregnancy.

Woman that evolved!

Let us take a look at the woman who is the result of the evolution of the primary life over a period of 3.6 billion years!

Nature has its own way of dealing with its basic elements, arranging them differently to form various of its manifestations, among them life on Earth.

First signs of life appeared about 6.4 billion years ago when some amino acids combined to form elementary life.⁷ About 4 billion years ago appeared the first simple animals (Eukaryotes, i.e. Amoeba) that later on developed into comb-jelly, the mother of all higher animals, and that subsequently evolved to present day animals, including humans. The best thing about the workings of Nature is that it has recorded each step of evolution that has happened in all living beings. It does not matter if it is galaxies, constellation of stars, planets or our own earth – Nature has left a trace how things have happened. Same is true for the evolution of life – its beginning, progress, various paths and stages that occurred in that change, and how we reached the present stage.

All females that produce egg, that develop into higher animals after fertilization, there is registration of each step of evolution that the ancestors of each animal or plant have gone through before they reach the present-day appearance and form.

In the case of human beings, the amoeba and paramecium are represented by the female egg and the male sperm. After the unification of the egg and the sperm the fertilized ovum goes through binary fission and all of the later steps for the development of the foetus. In a chain that goes from⁸

⁹Eukaryotes to Comb jelly to “Most familiar animals, including worms, flies, molluscs, sea stars and vertebrates — and including humans — have a head with a centralized brain, a gut running from mouth to anus, muscles and other shared features that had already evolved by the time of the famed “Cambrian Explosion” around 500 million years ago. Together, these animals are called bilaterians.”¹⁰, we have the record of all the stages each animal went through. The amazing thing is that for human conception and birth, this evolutionary progression that took 3.6 billion years, the whole process takes about nine months – 3.6 billion years condensed to 9 months. It is beyond imagination to envisage the speed at which these changes occur, but it happens right before our eyes in just about 274 days.

Today we have all kind of evidence how a human child is created and born. We have documentation for all its phases as photographic images; yet, the masters of all Abrahamic religions insist that their story of the masculine God, who was created by them, is true, while scientific records are false evidence. Woman, the natural creator of life, is defiled as unclean and unworthy.

⁸ “And so, it was a nice story: First came the unicellular protozoans, and then sponge-like multicellular consortia of such cells evolved and became the ancestor of all of today's animal diversity.17 maj 2023

⁹ Dozens of different studies using everything from chromosome evolution over time to ancient fossils have boiled it down to two candidates: sponges and comb jellies. Some of the best information about early animals comes from fossils dating back to the Cambrian period, which started around 541 million years ago.19 aug. 2024

It is all about money and power

The truth is that there is such a big economical scandal and sexual exploitation conducted all over the world in the form of various religious institutions that their corrupt office holders are not willing to accept the truth. And the biggest threat to these religious fabrications is the fact that the creator of human life is Woman and not a concocted God whose existence depends upon unquestionable beliefs.

Men have used all kind of accusations to keep women under their supremacy – physically weak and vulnerable, mentally unstable, intellectually inferior, bodily polluted etc. –, but they have not succeeded in producing children without women; not that they have not tried, but it does not seem to work.

Thus, as long as we are under the spell and grip of religious mafia there is little chance women would be set free to realise their own potential as human beings; therefore, it is of utmost importance to make people aware of the Natural truth, supported by scientific evidence, and warn them about the religious lies enforced upon us through unfounded beliefs.

Until then, the fabricated God of the religious elite would do its best to suppress the real creators of human life – Women.

P.S I do not deny that the presence of a supreme being, call it whatever you like, that is behind existence is fully probable, and one day we might learn what it is. But it is in no way anywhere close to the narcissist, egoistic, punishing God described in the books of the Semitic patriarchs. The God constructed by these tribal people is all too vain and ignorant of the scientific laws that keep order and, at times, bring about chaos in the universe that we know. My intention is to refute the patriarchal God that is merely the alter ego of these elders.

I am also fully aware that there have been some renowned female deities too – Isis (Egypt), Izanami (Japan), Abuk (Dinka), Nanã (West Africa), Manat, A'lat and ul'Uzza (Arabia), Mara (Latvia), Kali, Durga and Lakshami (India) etc – that had their own cults, but none seem to have a following of priests who could exploit their presence the same way as the followers of Abrahamic God or Indian gods.
